ILLUSTRATIONS

Equations

Equation numbers should be displayed consecutively from Eq. (1) to the end of the paper.

(1 line space)

$$m\ddot{x} + c\dot{x} + ks = f \quad (1)$$

(1 line space)

As shown in Eq. (1), enclose equation numbers in parentheses and place them flush-right in the column; leave one line of space above and below displaced equations.

Tables and Figures

Tables and figures may be placed in one column or centered on the page across both columns if necessary. Avoid language restrictive fonts (Japanese, Korean, Chinese, Russian, etc.) which may not be displayed truthfully on computers without such fonts. Images, e.g., graphs, line art, photographs, etc., should have an output resolution of at least 600 dpi. Do not shade the charts, graphs and tables with patterns within the software that you are using. You can create simple patterns (vector art) or use tints of black. Figures and images should be placed as close to their mention as possible. Place captions preferably right above the table and right below the figure being described.

Photographs

Use digitally processed data for photographs and do not insert scanned images.
